

Know O Prince that in the dark distance past of Flared trousers, Watney's Red Barrel and the Bay City Rollers, when we were lads and all we had were bits of stone, grass paintbrushes and Humbrol enamels there was a Wizard called Neville who produced wonder from solder. Wonder now seen on this table decades on, figures that were cast in the seventies, some of which have travelled from the UK to Germany, to Hong Kong, back to the UK, off again to Germany again, I digress, on this table are figures from the original 1970s Minifigs Sword and Sorcery Range, now available from Caliver Books, and displayed here by Tales from the Wargames Shed and Army Wargames Association.

Meanwhile"Between the time when the oceans drank Atlantis, and the rise of the sons of Aryas, there was an age undreamed of. And unto this, Conan, was destined to wear the jewelled crown of Aquilonia upon a troubled brow"

Here Conan, now King of Aquilonia leads an alliance of Western Nations against a host raised by the evil sorcerer To-Me-Ku-Pa to conquer the known world.

We see the hosts meet on the plains of Nid, between the ruins of Warsteiner and the ancient temple of Arrrrrg. Gasp in awe as the hosts thunder towards each other, a clash of horseflesh and metal, the shouts of frustration when a double one is thrown, the mistrust over a crucial dice throw, offer to buy the gamers a cup of tea!

The figures on the table are all from Minifigs, the Sword and Sorcery Range, with a few from other Minifigs ranges, Elephants and chariots. The rules are the Fantastic Battles rules, for more information speak to the chaps.
